

Photocopy this pattern at 200% onto 11" × 17" paper. Cut out your paper pattern and use it as a template for the I Dream of Jeany Bib—and the Vinyl Diner Bib, too (page 95).

Viva la '60s

Your hippie babe already has great experience in political activism, seeing as the first two weeks of his life were a sit-in. Now it's time for him to express his radical beliefs on his bib. Stencil or use puffy paints to get across such important global messages as "Give PEAS a chance!"

Want to cut up more and more things and convert them into bibs? Try chopping up old terry cloth bath towels. Just trace a bib onto the back of your towel, cut it out, and add hook-and-loop tape to the neck. Terry is great for absorbing your baby's many spits and spills.
