ultimately decided not to appeal John Eastman filed a motion with the court of appeals requesting the voluntary dismissal of his appeal. See Eastman v. Thompson, No 22-56013 (9th Cir. Nov. 7, 2022). The appellate court granted that motion (in part) and dismissed the appeal. Id. Although Eastman gave up on the merits of his case, he tried to invoke an arcane legal doctrine that would not reverse the ruling of the district court but would have the appellate court vacate the judgment of the district court. In other words, Eastman did not seek to change the outcome of the legal dispute, but he wanted the record of his loss in the district court erased from the books. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit rejected that request, see id., and the Supreme Court refused to consider his argument when he tried making it to that Court, see Eastman v. Thompson, No. 22-1138 (U.S. Oct. 2, 2023) (denying certiorari).
